Millennial Shift in Environmental Health & Safety

The objectives of the presentation are to:

- Collaborate to confirm or disprove industry stereotypes and their meanings
- Identify overlapping connections between all age groups
- Determine seven effective strategies to ease the transition between age groups

Embracing the age gap within the EHS field is a challenge we all - ironically - have in common. Millennials don't communicate well. Baby-boomers work too slowly. Creativity is lacking with Generation X. Are these stereotypes true? Do they matter?

Join the ASSE Tarheel Chapter for an interactive session that will highlight seven effective strategies for ensuring a smooth transition from the pioneers of safety to those we expect to continue and enhance the legacy of our industry. Participants will collaborate to discuss industry stereotypes and identify the connecting links between all age groups.

Speakers Due to cancellation by Sara Hoover, the original speaker, this workshop will be led by two of ASSE Tarheel chapter's Executive Committee members:

- Julianna Jankowski, GSP
H&S Professional, Duke Energy - Plant Allen CCP Field Support
- LaQuandra Jones
Loss Prevention Specialist, Wells Fargo
